

JOINT SESSION OF NESHAMINY BOARD, TEACHERS PLANNED

"To Bring About Better Acquaintance" Between Groups

EVENING OF MAY 2ND

Hope is To Have Representatives Raise Various Questions

LANGHORNE, Apr. 25—For the purpose of becoming better acquainted, directors of Neshaminy joint school board and faculty members from all parts of the district will meet in Middletown Friends meeting house on Wednesday, May 2nd, at eight p. m.

This decision was reached at a meeting of the joint board last evening in Neshaminy high school building, the presiding officer being Kenneth Comly, of Pennell. As Pennell board was not represented, no action could be taken on some detailed matters, it is announced.

The purpose of the meeting on May 2nd, it is stated, is "to bring about better acquaintance between board members and teachers." The particular purpose, the board announced, is "a sincere desire on the part of the board to understand what is going on in education today, and to get to personally know the teachers." Refreshments and a social time will follow the period in which various questions will be answered.

There are 70 teachers and 30 board members in the joint district.

"We hope to sit and talk over problems," stated a spokesman for the board today. One teacher is to be elected in each elementary school as representative; and possibly a representative from each department in the high school. Presentations by individuals will be limited to from three to five minutes.

The board will raise questions on various educational matters that it wishes enlightenment on; and the teachers will also put queries to the board.

"The board hopes to make this a beginning of a plan to secure an over-all view of what is going on in the schools," it was added. The expectation is to devote part of each board meeting in the future to the educational side of the schools, with the possibility of representatives of the faculty attending board meetings.

Aeromodelers Will Use New "Movie" Projector

The first showing of films on the Aeromodelers' own "movie" projector will be held this evening at 7:30 in the club's meeting room on Farragut avenue.

All interested persons are invited to attend.

This is the first of a series of meetings to revive interest of old members and secure as many new members as possible. With excellent model flying weather just around the corner, club members will soon be at the model airport testing new models to be used at the many meets to be held throughout the 1951 season. Leader members, who inspected the airport, report that it is in fair condition and will be better than ever when it is scraped and rolled. It is expected that a Bucks County Federation of model clubs contest will be held there in June.

Most recent model flight of note was one made by David Baker of the Aeromodelers whose free flight model disappeared over the Delaware river, south of Burlington, N. J.

Gratifying Report Made, Juices for Armed Forces

At the meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union held last evening at the home of Mrs. Adam Smith, Walnut street, a report from the state president, Mrs. Emma O. Leonard, on the project called "Miles of Dimes" for fruit juices for the armed forces in Korea, was read.

The campaign originated in the Ohio WCTU, and in December, 1950, the Pennsylvania women joined. To date one firm has cooperated in canning apple, grape, orange, pineapple, orange and grapefruit, and tomato juices in 5½-oz. cans, equipped with can opener, individually marked "Gift of The Pennsylvania WCTU—Not for Sale." Thus in late January, the first order of 900 cases, 43,200 cans, at a cost of $3,236, was sent to the point of embarkation by that firm. A total of almost $9,000 has been raised to date for this project.

Letters of thanks have been received from the secretary of the army, Archibald S. Alexander; from senators and congressmen; and from our fighting men who are receiving a refreshing fruit drink even in the hard-to-get-at points in combat areas.

Mrs. Calvin Rush, the president, presided. A social time was enjoyed, with Miss Jessie Mansell assisting Mrs. Smith as hostess.

The injured lad was taken to the Harrisman Hospital and later to the office of Dr. George T. Fox. X-rays are to be taken to determine the extent of the injuries.

M'ARTHUR GETS EVEN

Whether General MacArthur ever gets a chance to "pay back" President Truman for firing him, one thing is sure—he already has started getting even with the British government which played so big a part in undermining the General's status in the Far East.

The Britons played a double-dealing game with MacArthur, one which can be no source of pride to the English people. It only serves them right to find, just as they thought they had won, that they are worse off than ever. General MacArthur's speech to Congress was, at the bottom, a blistering attack on British policy with regard to Red China, and a scorching indictment of their attempts at appeasement.

It has brought anguished protests over his use of the word, appeasement; and elaborate explanations that, although the fundamental British policy is to try to buy peace from China at the price of putting her into the United Nations and giving her Formosa, it is unfair to call such a sell-out "appeasement."

The explanations don't explain. The British are on the spot. Moreover, President Truman also is unmercifully on the spot when it comes to doing what Dean Acheson undoubtedly would like to do, if he dared—and that is, go along with the British in this Munich-type deal.

MacArthur was fired for two reasons—first, this unholy sell-out was too much for him to stomach, and second, he refused to submit to orders to stop protesting it.

Army brass may try all they care to to make a case that MacArthur earned dismissal for lack of discipline—on the theory that a good army officer follows orders even if they blow out the window. Or they can split hairs and

THE WAR

By International News Service

TOKYO, Apr. 25—United Nations troops, aided by record artillery and air barrages, unleashed strong counter-attacks on Korea's central front today but gave more ground in the west to Chinese hordes bearing down within 20 miles of Seoul. Tank-led Allied spearheads also struck back at North Korean forces on the east wing of the 110-mile front, re-entering the road center of Inje, four miles above parallel 38, without contacting the enemy. In the west, however, a massive new Red assault, powered by three Chinese divisions, punched out local break-throughs down the Uijongbu "invasion corridor" north of Seoul and reached within 20 miles of the South Korean capital. Residents of newly-threatened Seoul already were fleeing south in the third civilian evacuation of the wrecked capital city since the Korean war began ten months ago.

BATTLE INADEQUATE SANITARY FACILITIES

Crackdown Campaign Spurred By State Health Department

INSPECTIONS ORDERED

HARRISBURG, Apr. 25—(INS)—Inadequate sanitary facilities in hundreds of housing developments in Pennsylvania today spurred a crackdown campaign by the State Health Department.

Secretary Russell E. Teague ordered inspection of private sewage disposal systems at homes purchased hereafter through the Veterans Administration or the Federal Housing Administration.

Large-scale migration of families from cities to unsewered suburban areas in the last few years has given rise in many cases to construction of unsatisfactory waste disposal systems, he said.

"We have had numerous complaints on this score from war veterans," Teague reported.

"Many of these veterans have been victimized by unscrupulous building contractors who sold them homes in localities where there was no room for the installation of an adequate waste disposal system," he said.

In other cases, he added, "the contractor did not provide an installation which would operate efficiently."

"Cesspools were frequently installed," Teague said, "and these usually worked unsatisfactorily and polluted underground water supplies."

Contractors are immune to prosecution under existing regulations, however, and the purchasers of the homes have no legal recourse.

SET HULMEVILLE SCHOOL TAX

HULMEVILLE, Apr. 25—Dr. N. P. Larson presided over the brief session of Hulmeville school board held last evening in the Hulmeville school house. Three members of the board were in attendance in addition to Dr. Larson, namely: Mrs. Willard Bartoe, Edward Linforth, and Howard J. Black. A rate of 35 mills was set for school tax for the coming year.

During National Home Demonstration week, April 29 to May 5th, homemakers will take stock of their resources and plan to reinforce some of the important segments on the home front. Whether on the farm or in the city, a home is the same," Miss Vannoy reminds.

RESPONSIBILITY TO CHILDREN IS THEME

For National Home Demonstration Week, April 29th to May 5th

AT BUCKINGHAM HALL

"Our Responsibility Toward Children and Youth" is Pennsylvania's theme for National Home Demonstration week, April 29 to May 5th. During that week Bucks County homemakers, who are taking part in the agricultural and home economics extension programs, will center their interest on children and youth.

A spring homemakers' day is planned for May 2nd, in Tyro Hall Grange, Buckingham. The committee in charge of the program has planned to have youth participate in discussions. Members of the program committee are: Mrs. Amos Satterthwaite, Yardley; Mrs. Cliff Magill, Carversville; Mrs. Russell Yost, Richboro; Mrs. John Wright, Yardley and Mrs. Herbert Post, Langhorne.

Not only are homemakers setting aside one day to consider their responsibility toward future citizens, but they also will exhibit some of the work they have accomplished through participation in home economics extension. Homemakers cannot show in dollars and cents all of their achievements, for many of these are seen in improved family health and living, healthy personalities in their children, and more family cooperation.

For further information on homemakers' day individuals may consult one of the program committee members or Miss Frances Vannoy, agricultural extension office in Doylestown.

Plane With 100 Aboard Makes Emergency Landing

New York—A chartered plane carrying 100 passengers made an emergency landing today at Idlewild Airport. The DC-4 was scheduled to land in Millville, N. J., with the Puerto Rican farm laborers when a leak in the hydraulic system was spotted. The pilot switched his course and headed for Idlewild because of the longer runway. He skidded the plane 5,000 feet to a stop. The farm laborers were taken by bus to Glassboro, N. J., for a summer's work.

Asks MacArthur's Return As Advisor

Find $1500 Worth Missing Clothing in Neighbor's House

Philadelphia—A calm residential area in Southwest Philadelphia was spared today from becoming a virtual "nudist colony" with the arrest of 46-year-old Mrs. Karen Diehl. A crowd of 18 irate neighbors appeared at a hearing before Magistrate James T. Donnelly and testified to thefts of clothing, diapers, linens and other items of clothing from their clotheslines. Mrs. Diehl denied stealing anything but police said they recovered about $1500 worth of the stolen articles from her home. Assistant District Attorney Allen Goodman declared: "If this had continued, the neighborhood would have developed into a nudist colony."

Industries of 'Morrisville Display Samples of Their Products

(By Staff Reporter)

PENNS MANOR, Apr. 25—At a dinner-meeting which hit a high peak for the Bucks County Boroughs Association, last evening, 154 members representing 18 of the 23 boroughs, and a number of invited guests, heard the story of the relationship of United States Steel Corp. to its employees and how it fits into a community of which it becomes a part.

The session, held in the Penn Manor Club, drew a banner attendance, and not only those active in local affairs were present, but men high in the affairs of the steel industry were in attendance.

The speaker of the evening was Earl E. Moore, vice president of industrial relations of U. S. Steel. (Mr. Moore's remarks in part will be found elsewhere in these columns). There was a program of entertainment, and seven of Morrisville's industries had exhibits in an adjoining room which showed the diversity of industry which goes to make up that thriving lower Bucks County community, now on the threshold of becoming the center of the steel industry.

The dining hall was enhanced in its attractiveness by tables decorated with spring flowers, plaques showing, by drawings and charts, the steel industry, what it makes and what it uses. A large aerial map, in relief, showed location of the Fairless Works of U. S. Steel Company, while a display of photographs gave a word picture of the ground-breaking ceremonies for the new plant now under construction just over the boundary line of the borough of Morrisville. There were distributed last evening the clasp souvenirs, miniatures of spades like those used at the ground breaking. Replicas of steel ingots served as center decorations for the tables, and a large reproduction of the trade mark of

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan (Distributed by International News Service)

Russia isn't the greatest menace to our economy . . . it's television!

We spent a week with Kefauver, a week with MacArthur, we have two weeks vacation coming and there's one non-productive month shot.

I know one family that has plugged the set into the kitchen range and now lives in the kitchen on a four-hours-on, four-hours-off basis with look-outs posted on each channel.

This being able to live modern history is great stuff, but no one has figured how the 20 inch screen fits into the cost of living yardstick.

Life was simpler when you could turn on the set and know that it was either Berle or Howdy-Doody . . . today it's contemporary history and who can afford to be ill-informed?

But one of the best shows is the Blair House "Trouble or Nothing" and the Republicans "Just Plain Bill."

But sometimes we envy the old-timers who had to wait for the pony express . . . they were ignorant, but blissful.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1951
LETTING GEORGE DO IT
The Treasury Department, which is constantly seeking ways to get other people to do its work, has again asked Congress to pass a law authorizing a withholding tax at the source on corporation dividends and interest payments by banks and other institutions. A somewhat similar proposal was accepted by the House of Representatives last year but defeated by the Senate.
Undeterred by that setback, the Treasury has a new plan which goes even further than the one that was rejected. The idea last year was simply to force corporations to collect and withhold 10 per cent of the dividends they paid. This year the ante has been raised to 20 per cent and the law would apply to practically everything except interest paid by one individual to another.
It may be agreed that the government does lose a sizable amount of revenue because some taxpayers fail to report income received from dividends and interest. But that is always the case when taxes become confiscatory and resentment against ruinous taxation grows.
The withholding tax program would impose a tremendous book-keeping expense on business firms and banks and their profits, now taxed at a high rate, would be reduced as a result. This loss in corporation tax income by the Treasury would at least partially offset increased revenue resulting from the withholding tax.

NAMES OUT OF THE NEWS
A little news item chronicles the appearance at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Elk City, Okla., of Jess Willard, who worked in Elk City as a hod carrier 40 years ago. To the younger generation the name didn't register. Jess, of course, was the heavyweight champion of the world who was defeated by Jack Dempsey. Who was Dempsey? He was defeated by Tunney—but this could go on forever.
Names that are in all the newspapers during the heyday of the individuals they identify are forgotten quickly when they cease to appear in print. How many of the big shots of the Truman administration will be readily identifiable by a newspaper reader 10 years hence? Vaughan? Acheson? Any of the President's congressional leaders?
The name of Lindbergh has disappeared from the public prints and members of the younger set have a hazy idea of who he is. Twenty years ago he was the nation's No. 1 hero, and his coming and goings were chronicled in the press to the point that publicity became distasteful to him.
Who today can identify Rexford Guy Tugwell? Fifteen years ago he was frequently referred to in the newspapers as "Assistant President."

Nothing seems more certain than death, taxes and the oblivion that invariably overtakes public figures. Politicians, actors, prize fighters—all suffer the same fate.

MacArthur Gets Even

insist that the General ought to have resigned his assignment if he found himself out of sympathy with his commander-in-chief's policy.

The fact of the matter is that the policy MacArthur was urging was basically what both Mr. Truman and Dean Acheson said they stood for, and have said so over and over again, every time that attention has been called to the threat of an appeasement sell-out in the Far-East.

But these two statesmen of ours have been, right on the face of it, telling the British Government quite another story, and that's where the trouble started.

General MacArthur made the error of listening to the words, and disregarding the "signals."

Now the cat is out of the bag, and everybody has his eyes open, and no under-the-table trickery will pass unnoticed.

The British government, with its duplicitous game exposed by the very man it had just helped get fired, now has to go through the motions of being back of President Truman, back of Uncle Sam, back of the American boys who have been silently stopping bullets in this nameless fighting going on in Korea.

And there's where the rub comes. Thanks largely to the results in Great Britain of blunders made by the White House in Washington, British finances are at their lowest ebb. The budget closet is bare. Not only are the British people having to tighten their belts in the most drastic "austerity" yet known, but the British government is having to whittle down other expenditures so as to build up its military effort—now that the eyes of the world are on it.

Thanks to MacArthur's spot-putting speech, the British Socialists are now at length forced to the unpopular step of retrenching the "cradle to grave" program of government giveaways.

Already members of the socialistic Labor Party are in open revolt, and all signs point to a period of great unhappiness and turmoil in the British government, with much likelihood that the whole house of cards will come tumbling down almost any day.

Both Truman and MacArthur had a finger in producing this result. Figuratively speaking, it may be said that Truman loaded the gun—and MacArthur pulled the trigger!

Picnic for Pupils Is Planned by Parent Group

Plans were discussed for a picnic for the children at the close of the school term, and election of officers for the ensuing year took place last evening during a meeting of Maple Shade-Newportville Parent-Teacher Association in Maple Shade School. Walter Crawford was in charge of the meeting, which 75 attended.

Prior to the business session accordion solos were rendered by Ethel Gentsch and Mille-Jean Kleese. Jacqueline Riggs favored with a tap dance.

Plans were discussed for the picnic for pupils of both schools to be held the last day of school, June 15th, on Maple Shade school grounds. Mrs. Edmund Tier will be chairman of this affair.

During election of officers the following were named: President, Mrs. J. Floyd Peters, Maple Shade; secretary, Mrs. Arthur Hinkley, Crofton Manor; treasurer, Mrs. Lester Gentsch, Winder Village; vice-presidents—Newportville, Mrs. Emily Given; Winder Village, Mrs. Clyde Kleese, Jr.; Maple Shade, Mrs. William Kling; Upper West Bristol, Mrs. Earl Hyde; Maple Beach, Mrs. William Michalsky; Crofton Manor, Mrs. William Foster; Lower West Bristol, Mrs. Charles Long; Fergusonville, Henry Dawicki.

These newly-elected officers will be installed during the May session. Arrangements were made for a gift to be sent to the janitor, who is hospitalized.

Teachers from the two schools served refreshments.

COMMUNICATIONS

Editor Courier,

Having read your editorial with interest, I obtained my husband's permission to send you a copy of the letter which he sent to President Truman upon learning of General MacArthur's dismissal.

With the approaching dictatorship, under which you both would be liquidated, it occurred to me that it might be gratifying to you to know that you would have company.

My husband explains that Mr. Truman's insistence on retaining the RFC as a lending agency on one hand, while endeavoring to restrict credit through private loan-making agencies, such as banks, installment houses, finance and loan companies on the other, is evidence of deep thought on his part, as by this method he hopes to confuse the Russians and prevent a third world war!

Very truly yours,
ROSA C. KENNEDY,
Edgely.

Editor Courier,

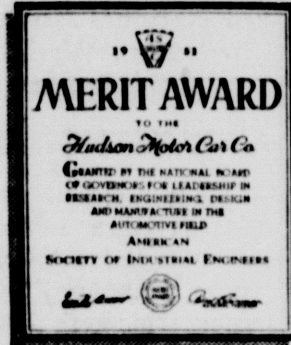

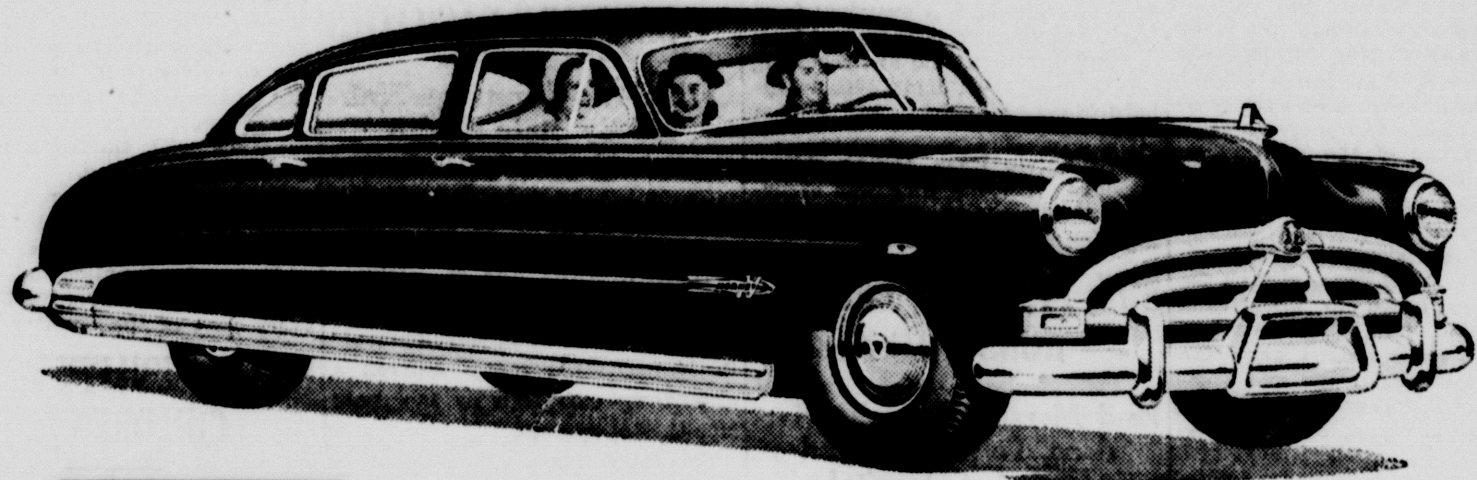

I wish to congratulate you on your article, "A Day to Remember". It is the best I have read to date. I am glad to hear so many people for MacArthur instead of against him. I have lived here in Bristol only four months, but I like it almost as much as my own home town. In fact, it reminds me of my home town as it was many years ago. More power to you and your paper. I hope you will continue to prosper.

Sincerely,
(MRS.) FLORENCE M. THOM,
Bristol Terrace II.

Pearl Harbor—1941, Korea—1951. Only ten years. But in that time the Bell System's capacity to serve the Nation has literally doubled!

And the Long Distance telephone network which ties America together has grown even more. In 1941, there was very little coaxial cable in use. Radio relay was still in an experimental stage. Yet today there are 8,000 miles of coaxial cable in service—plus thousands of miles of radio relay. And Long Distance telephone circuits have increased in ten years from about 4,800,000 miles to 20,800,000.

In times like these, telephone lines are defense lines. For they are helping America rush its big production program. It's fortunate this nationwide network has grown so big, so fast.

"Fairless Steel Night" Marked by An Address

ness of my business, its hope of living and surviving, and even prospering, rely to a very great degree on the ability of the various groups that represent the social life of any community to be able to live together and work in harmony.

"The United States Steel Company considers social aspects in those communities where it functions to be of prime importance, and it follows that we must not only keep you and our other neighbors acquainted with our activities, but we must likewise, to the very limit of our ability, assist our employees to adjust themselves in their working environment. A proposition such as this cannot be one-sided. We would be unfair in making this statement were we not to add that we expect the communities where we operate to carry their fair portion of the responsibility. Competent government, sound school systems, spiritual leadership and up-and-coming civic organizations exert much influence in determining the caliber of a community's citizens.

"We have had the privilege of heading up industrial relations functions in this company for more than a decade. Our interest in such matters, however, may be said to date back to the day of our initial employment with United States Steel more than thirty years ago. We make this personal reference only to point out that what we say to you comes from first-hand experience. Never a day passes that we do not try to improve on the previous day regarding our public and internal relationships. Some of these steps are the culmination of much thought and work that had their beginning within the past decade. We in the Company recognize that unless people know who we are and what we are trying to accomplish, there can be all kinds of speculation as to our proper place in a community. Since we have such extensive facilities in United States Steel Company, this point becomes all the more important, inasmuch as our mere size makes it difficult sometimes for those who are not a part of the business to comprehend the activities of a single plant where many skills and many operations are involved in the production of a multitudinous line of products.

"I know that you must have asked yourselves on occasion—Is U. S. Steel fair-minded? Are its people frank and above board? Do they operate behind an Iron Curtain? Fair questions, and they deserve an answer. We have no secrets. We have never hidden anything from the people in South Chicago, or Gary, from the people in Youngstown or Johnstown or Pittsburgh. We intend, as in all of our other operations, to let the people of Bucks County know what we are doing at any given time that might seem of importance to them. We base this on our experience in other plants where events have occurred that were matters for public conjecture. When the facts were presented in the proper light and in relation to our entire operating picture, the situation was always clarified.

"We have had open house programs in all localities. Hundreds of thousands of visitors have gone through our properties whenever the national situation for security reasons so permitted. We go to great lengths to improve the appearance of our properties, realizing that this is only good business, since it improves the working environment, attracts to our employment the type of people we desire and decreases potential accident factors. Special efforts are made to keep our employees informed of the economic system under which we all live, and to make such material available to our friends in the community also. We feel that this information helps the employee to adjust himself and to become a better citizen, which redounds not only to our own benefit, but largely to the community in which he resides. It is realized that we must do everything possible to narrow the gap that might exist in any situation between Management and the employees and the public. With in the past year or so we have contemplated a much more comprehensive coverage of matters that are of vital significance to the welfare of those interested in our various plant communities. This is being done only after careful research and with the conviction that no business can survive unless it has the support and endorsement of its employees, its customers, and the public.

"It is because all of us here this evening are deeply concerned and have felt the impact in one degree or another of the human factor that we should like to present to you briefly a few of the considerations which prompted United States Steel Company to settle upon its present management-employee policy. We realize that the physical sciences have added substantially to the well-being of all of us, but we also realize that our total well-being cannot be achieved through the application of physical science alone. "In reality, it is only from the heart and feelings and understandings of men that there can stem the material from which we fabricate the kind of industrial and political world in which we desire to live. For example, we can surround ourselves with unbelievable quantities of goods, but unless we have the inward desire to live with one another to our mutual benefit, we cannot prosper and grow.

"Due to scientific development along physical lines and as a result of our amazing progress, too many of us have been inclined in the past to adapt the same principles to the solution of human problems. And yet the balance between emotional conflict and harmony rests upon such delicate factors as hopes, fears, doubts, suspicions, and even the nobler quality, faith. A combination of these factors may be more pronounced in one individual than in another or in one group than in another. We could not expect, for instance, immediate understanding and responsibility when, rather unceremoniously, we threw together individuals with entirely different cultural backgrounds—for instance, a man from the back country with the city sophisticate.

"It is through the natural clash of attitudes or actions of different groups not properly assimilated that inconsistencies are created. As a matter of fact, we comprehend knowing more about the structure of living of our various employees to the end that we might create more favorable group attitudes while on the job. All of the characteristics, the customs, those things an employee considers to be right, his folk-lore, and so on carry over into his working environment, and unless we in the company have a proper comprehension of what they are, we may aggravate the situation through improper placement, or in other words, by placing him in a more highly antagonistic group.

"Practical solution of the problem of proper integration of new employees may well be the answer to many industrial and community problems. Such a solution is good for a community in that it provides a steady type of citizen. The few instances just mentioned are the same as transplanting a man from one state of living to another, and yet we have taken it more or less for granted that such employees both new and old when brought together would react in a normal manner, which is nothing more or less than the standards which have been arbitrarily established.

"It is true that we need all of the scientific developments of which man is capable, but only when we fortify that knowledge with an equivalent development of man as a social entity will there be a continuity of well-being. One could not expect to work a jigsaw puzzle by keeping all of the individual parts in a continuous state of flux, hoping that somewhere in a million shakings all of the parts would miraculously fall into place. The individual man is something like an individual part of a puzzle. If we study him singly, as well as his relation to the other pieces, we will find where he belongs. Disregard certain designs of the puzzle, and when it is put together, one will have gaping holes that destroy the completeness of the picture. Disregard a certain type of man, and the business or the community also may not be complete. In his right place, each man will find the means for the self-expression he seeks. In our adjustment to our environment and adequate provisions for self-expression there can be but one result. Instead of needless misunderstanding, and waste, frustration and hopelessness growing out of misunderstanding, there will come a true sense of well-being in that man can be master not only of his physical environment, but of himself as well.

"In speaking of the individual employee mastering himself, we appreciate that on the average there is a certain percentage of those who make up the human race who are haunted all the days of their lives by this thing called insecurity. Frankly, close observation over the years, as well as experience with many types of employees, leads us to the conviction that insecurity is nothing more than the manifestation on the part of a given individual that his station in the community lacks status and does not carry with it actual security through his standing with his fellowmen. It is a definite objective in United States Steel to bring to everyone an understanding of the significance of his position as it relates to the over-all scheme of things, to the end that each employee will understand his importance and realize the dignity of his work. By pyramiding this understanding, an entire organization should benefit and develop as a team.

"Looking beyond our own operations, the community itself offers a vast field of opportunity. Such a program as we comprehend cannot be successful traveling a one-way street. The community has certain responsibilities itself that exceed anything it has appreciated or attempted in the past. The corporation can be helpful, of course, to the extent that we recognize our responsibility in encouraging and assisting, where practicable, in this work. We predicate this view solely on the fact that our employees are a part of the company only when they are within their working environment. We must remember, on the other hand, that they are citizens of the community for the major portion of their time. Of course, the employees carry with them beyond the mill gates characteristics of their work, their training, and experience while on the job, but at the same time they bear with them all their working lives the influence of those factors that impinge upon them in their social and cultural pursuits as citizens.

"When it is considered that these same individuals are in many instances father, husband, church member, citizen, lodge member and a host of other relationships, it becomes readily apparent that the impact of these relationships upon the plant relationships cannot be discarded by the mere entry of the individual into the plant. Conversely, the social relationships within the plant have a similar impact upon the community.

"Whether in the mill or in the community, we should never deplore but rather strive to foster maximum understanding in every situation that affects an employee or a citizen before any action is taken. Regardless of a person's mode of living or the social structure in which he resides, he still desires respect as an individual and toleration for his customs.

"As mentioned before, these are merely a few of the aims and steps we are taking to bring about a better understanding of our social responsibilities. Practical solution of the problem of proper integration of new employees may well be the answer to many industrial and community problems. Progress, of course, cannot be substantial unless there is sincere effort and the approach calls forth a high degree of receptivity.

"For the purpose of illustration, we have prepared a graphic presentation which summarizes our industrial relations activities in United States Steel Company. These activities have been in effect, with occasional modifications and improvements for a number of years in our operations in other communities. The same techniques and methods will be utilized here at the Fairless Works as required by the times or the needs of the moment."

Using a metallic board as a background, Mr. Moore pointed out diagrammatically the philosophy that underlies the over-all program with regard to the United States Steel Corporation's employees and their relationship to the physical properties, production, and the business as a whole.

Continuing, Mr. Moore said: "This program, which we usually refer to as our Activated Philosophy in industrial relations, is put into practice daily. It can never be any better than the comprehension of those men within our Company who are responsible for making it work. We believe that, on the whole, however, we possess a management team with far better than average appreciation of human values.

"We can assure you that the Fairless Works will have men at the helm who will bring to this plant an to this community the best experience that is available in our company. We should like to mention a few words on behalf of those who will head certain activities at Fairless Works. Al Berdis, the General Superintendent, has served an apprenticeship of more than 20 years. During all of this time I have been in a position to watch his development since he came to us as a college recruit from Purdue. He has had a keener appreciation with the passing of each year of those values in life we come to cherish, such as respect for one another, recognition of the contributions of others, the ability to coordinate the work effort of others, coupled with the important ingredient of enthusiasm.

"The same can be said for Henry Warren, who will be the Assistant General Superintendent of Fairless Works. Mr. Warren came from our great plant at Homestead where he acquired sound experience in steel-making.

"Forest Smith, Assistant to the General Superintendent, was associated with us in the Gary Works as early as 1936, although we had known him prior to that time. During the past five years he has been our Director of Labor Relations in the Pittsburgh General Office. He has a broad understanding of industrial relations matters and a sympathetic approach that we rarely—but fortunately when we do—find wrapped up in one man.

"Fred Lafferty was the Assistant Superintendent of Industrial Relations in our Edgar Thomson Works in the Pittsburgh area for a number of years and for the past few years has been handling the Company's college recruiting activities out of the general office. He, likewise, brings with him a wealth of experience both in industrial and community relations matters.

"Joseph Dembeck, who will be works auditor of the Fairless Works, has been associated with United States Steel since 1939 when he began in the methods and procedure division at our General Offices in Pittsburgh. For the past six years, he has been supervisor of our works accounting staff.

"As division superintendent of coke works and blast furnaces, Emerson Miller comes to the Fairless Works with 27 years of supervisory experience in our Company's blast furnace operations. He has been superintendent of the Carrie Furnaces of our Homestead District Works near Pittsburgh since 1946.

"The Fairless Works' division superintendent of rolling will be Theodore Koenig who began his service with the Company in 1926 and was recently superintendent of the 80-inch mill at our Gary Sheet and Tin Mill in Gary, Indiana. In the same general area of operations will be Amos Bledsoe, as division superintendent of the plant's sheet and tin operations. He also has more than twenty years of service with United States Steel and was superintendent of sheet finishing and galvanizing at our Irvin Works near Pittsburgh.

"Kermit Johannsen began service with the Company in 1936 and assumes his position as division superintendent of maintenance and utilities at the Fairless Works following ten years as general maintenance foreman at our Irvin Works.

"While the area of production planning is a fairly recent addition to industry, John Brownlee, who will be superintendent of production planning here at the Fairless Works, has had a part in United States Steel Company's production planning activities since 1944. He started service with us as an industrial engineer in 1936, and has been assistant to the general manager of production planning in our General Offices since 1948.

"Lester Walker, with 21 years of service in our metallurgical activities, was assistant chief metallurgist of our Edgar Thomson Works at Braddock, Pennsylvania, before being named chief metallurgist of the Fairless Works, and Maynard Rich, who will be the plant industrial engineer, has held various supervisory positions in several plants of the Company since his service with us began in 1936. Recently, he was assistant plant industrial engineer at our Duquesne, Pennsylvania, Works.

"Howard Parker, a United States Steel employee since 1928 and a member of management since 1933, will be superintendent of the open hearth facilities at Fairless Works. Since 1950, Mr. Parker has been superintendent of the number four open hearth at our South Chicago, Works after nine years as superintendent of the number two open hearth at that plant.

"Many of you will come to know these men personally, as well as others on the Fairless Works management team. We are certain that in these associations you will find them and their colleagues to be worthy additions to your community—sound, responsible men to whom you can look for full cooperation in meeting your own problems of community life. It is through men of this caliber, therefore, as well as by the concrete programs we have mentioned, that we hope to accomplish our objectives within the scope of our social responsibilities.

"We have talked about many things here this evening, but they all sum up to this: what is good for the people of Bucks County—culturally, spiritually, socially—is good also for us. We are vitally interested in you, in your community and the events that take place here. It is our hope that you are as equally interested in us.

"There is a thought we have carried with us these many years that we would like to leave with you. That thought is this: the United States Steel Company is not just a mass of furnaces, and a stockpile of coal and iron ore, a number of employees and altogether a capacity of tons of steel. This Company is a living, a vital thing; and being alive it has a moral standard, a very high moral standard, which we have tried to explain to you this evening.

"We are proud of our Company, just as we know you are proud of Bucks County, and we can assure you that we will try to add to your pride by being a part of your life here. Morrisville, as we understand it, barely missed the added measure of fame and immortality of becoming the capital of the United States. A couple of votes, as we recall, made the difference between having the capital along the Potomac rather than along your beautiful Delaware.

"We do not believe any of you need to worry about not being a capital. You are sandwiched by capitals—there is Trenton across the river and Harrisburg a few miles away, and we all know that in a sandwich the filling counts tremendously.

Concluding the speaker said: "We believe that today you stand on the threshold of great achievements and that you may still attain an added measure of fame. We assure you with the wholehearted cooperation which we pledge you, and the splendid support which we are sure you will give us, we will do our fair share and more in proving that we are the kind of neighbors who merit commendation and are an asset to the community."

"U. S. Steel" hung upon the wall above the fireplace.

There were vocal selections by Charles Bird and the "Minutemen." The session was presided over by Robert May, of Langhorne, president of the association. William Burgess, Burgess of Morrisville, extended a welcome to the visitors, and expressed his appreciation to those who had cooperated toward making the affair of the evening such a success. Among the guests presented were: Simon K. Moyer, Joseph Hallowell, Bucks County commissioners; John Dwyer, of the county tax office; Harry M. Lair, president of Morrisville borough council; William Howell, secretary of Morrisville borough council; Watson Simon, treasurer, Morrisville borough; Lawrence F. Newall, Sr., superintendent of Morrisville water works; Walter Newmann, outside superintendent of Morrisville borough; John S. The business meeting of the association was very brief. Russell Bond, treasurer, reported a balance of $869.85 in the treasury. The minutes were read by Charles Knap, Quakertown, secretary. There were vocal selections by Donald Lang; and Eugene Devreux sang an original selection with "Morrisville" as the theme. A telegram was read from T. Sidney Cadwallader, 2nd, expressing regrets at being unable to attend. Music for the occasion was furnished by an orchestra provided through the courtesy of Local No. 62, of Trenton, N. J., American Federation of Musicians. Invitations for the next meeting to be held at Quakertown and Newtown were received. No action was taken.

John Appleyard, U. S. Steel public relations representative, was introduced, and he in turn presented Albert J. Berdis, general superintendent of U. S. Steel; J. Donald Rollins, production manager; Fred B. Lafferty, superintendent of industrial relations; Robert M. Lewis, supervisor of personnel; Stephen Wesley, assistant superintendent of industrial relations.

In a side room seven industries of Morrisville had on exhibit samples of their products. These included: Vulcanized Rubber & Plastics Co.; Penn Decorating Co.; Coney Re-built Engines; Pennsbury Pottery; Victor Chemical Works; Robinson Manufacturing Co.; and Rednor & Kline, building materials. The exhibits were the center of much interest.

Members of Bristol borough council and other officials from Bristol attending the meeting of the Bucks County Boroughs Association, held at the Penns Manor Club, last evening, were as follows: Clarence W. Winter, Francis J. Byers, John H. Wichser, Francis J. Byers, Nicholas Pascale, Richard T. Myers, William W. Wallace, John Gosline, William J. McHugh, Joseph Ferry, John Smoyer, 3d, and Joseph Duffy, members of council; John L. Kilcoyne, Esq., Bristol borough solicitor; John Paglione, borough secretary and Livingston Joyce, borough engineer.

Councilman Edward R. Roberts, Jr., was chairman of committee on arrangements.

NEW YORK. — (INS) — Roast loin of pork is one of America's favorite meat dishes. But housewives often overlook the economical pork roasts that are cut from the end of the loin rather than the fancier center roasts. The end cut roasts sell for less per pound than the center cut roasts. Although they're a bit harder to carve, they yield the same juicy, fine-flavored meat.

course after they have moved in, according to Teague.

Although no new law has been passed, VA and FHA regulations now provide for State inspection of sanitary facilities before homes are financed through them may be constructed.

Teague said all prospective purchasers of homes first should contact the State Health Department for advice in determining the type of waste disposal system they should install.

He outlined the new inspection procedure in a directive to all State district medical directors, county medical directors and 139 sanitary assistants.

While designed primarily for VA and FHA developments, he said, the service is available to any prospective home purchaser in Pennsylvania.

Teague said the department does not favor cesspools as disposal systems except where it can be predetermined that they will not affect underground waters.

"Under no circumstances will the use of abandoned wells or drilled bore holes be considered as satisfactory methods of waste disposal," he said.

The Department's action followed receipt of complaints from home-owners whose sanitary facilities have become inoperative and who must bear the cost of improvement themselves.

Contractors in most of these cases have built homes without regard to future sanitation requirements, according to the complaints, and cannot be forced to pay for reconstruction once they have sold the homes.

Most instances have been reported in industrialized sections of the State, with a large number charged in western Pennsylvania.

NEWS OF SCHOOLS IN AREA--

All public, private and parochial schools in the Bristol area are invited to send news items for publication in this column which appears frequently.

George School

NEWTOWN, Apr. 25. — Spring Parents Day, with several hundred "dads" and "moms" from half a dozen states visiting campus on April 28, will be featured event of the week at George School, but the school's music program and sports program share the news.

Pennsbury high school's chorus was to present the Tuesday assembly program at George School in another of the continuing series of exchange programs, and the G Squires (singing band) and Dixieland band will provide music for the Friday night dance at Morrisville high, as the groups did last Friday at Neshaminy Valley Youth Center, in Newtown.

Robert Steele, music director, also revealed that Mark Bostock, graduate of Bryn Athyn Academy, will present a piano recital at George School Sunday night at 6:30 for faculty and students. Music lovers are invited to see on May 11 the school's performance of "The Pirates of Penzance," in the assembly room. A musical highlight for the spring will be the orchestra's accompanying, on May 22, the Bel Canto Choir of Trenton, N. J., in a few numbers during the choir's annual concert. Finally, the George School marching band will present an outdoor concert on campus May 26, spring alumni reunion day.

Pointing toward the 19th annual invitation track meet and tennis tournament, which brings to George School 16 track teams and eight tennis squads on May 5th, Georgian athletes won two out of three events last Saturday. Coach Seeger's netmen rolled over Haverford School 6-0 to continue unbeaten before meeting Penn Charter, at home, on Tuesday and Lawrenceville this Saturday. Coach Stanley Sutton's thin clads made it one and one for the season by beating Perkiomen School 78-39 on Saturday. They were slated to face Cheltenham high, at home, on Tuesday.

Coach "Ed" Thode's baseball team bowed 6-5 to Frankford high, first 1951 loss, in a loosely played game last Saturday which saw an incredible 19 errors committed by both teams. Newtown's "Dick"
